This Account is not balanced for the reasons given in the Victualling Board's Letters to the Admiralty, of the following dates; viz.—10 February 1830; 2 January 1831; 31 January 1831. In addition to which it may be stated, by way of further illustration, that the first item in the debit side of the Account; viz. "Balance in the Treasurer's hands, 1 January 1830," £.78,644. 0. 2., is not expended merely by the payment of the sums on the credit side of the Account, but is appropriated (together with the sums subsequently received) to the payment of Bills registered in November and December 1829; for instance, 60 Day Bills amounting to £.125,470. 19. 9., which being considered as Cash when made out in 1829, are then brought to account so far as regards the Head of Expenditure, though not paid until due in the next year, and consequently interfering with the Balances of that year, so as to preclude the possibility

This Account is not balanced, for the reasons given in the Victualling Board's Letters to the Admiralty, of the following dates; viz.—10 February 1830; 2 January 1831; 31 January 1831. In addition to which it may be stated, by way of further illustration, that the first item in the Debit-side of the Account, viz. "Balance in the Treasurer's hands, 1 Janurry 1830," £.78,644. 0. 2., is not expended merely by the payment of the sums on the Credit-side of the Account, but is appropriated (together with the sums subsequently received) to the payment of Bills registered in November and December 1829; for instance, 60-day Bills, amounting to £.125,470. 19. 9., which being considered as Cash when made out in 1829, are then brought to account so far as regards the Head of Expenditure, though not paid until due in the next year, and consequently interfering with the Balances of that year, so as to preclude the possibility possibility of making the Account balance when the credit is confined to the Expenditure, or Bills registered in the year 1830, in as far as the same can be made out, with reference to the receipt of Accounts from abroad. While, on the other hand, the Credit-side of this Account includes the 60-day Bills (considered as Cash, and therefore brought to account in 1830, amounting, for the 60-day Bills, to £.115,383. 6. 10.) made out in November and December of that year, but not payable till 1831, though in this Account of Expenditure for 1830, they are necessarily (being, as before stated, considered as Cash Payments, so far as regards the Head of Expenditure) placed on the Credit-side of the Account, as if they were actually paid out of the Receipts on the Debit-side, thus confounding all Balances by the running Receipts and Payments into different years.
